The acute management of subarachnoid hemorrhage is a challenge for the neurologist. Specifically, the transition from the emergency department to inpatient management poses a risk of delayed cerebrospinal fluid evacuation, edema, rebleeding, seizures, and hydrocephalus. Delays in the diagnosis and treatment of acute subarachnoid hemorrhage often occur owing to a lack of awareness of the condition among physicians. After these delays are overcome, patients undergo an emergent diagnostic lumbar puncture and may undergo emergent intracranial pressure monitoring, angiography, or neurosurgical intervention for aneurysm b7e8fdf5c8
